Red Strategy: Push Into Far, Middle East

Detailed U.S. Study Report Expects Soviet To Work Relentlessly

WASHINGTON (AP)—A preliminary U. S. study pictures Communist strategy for Round 2 of the cold war as this: Hold the line in Europe and push steadily south in the Middle and Far East.

Such relentless downward pressure from the Russo-Red Chinese empire, this study indicates, is not the kind that can be checked solely by a "policy of containment" such as the Truman administration devised to hem in Soviet military power.

The new Communist plan is viewed as involving much more than that—economic aid and trade concessions, for instance—and as being too complex and too subtly applied for a single solution. Further U. S. countermeasures are expected as the study, being conducted by the highest councils of the government, progresses.

Still there are, of course, the Russian bear's muscle and growl, Soviet military might and the threat to use it. This was nowhere better demonstrated than in the last week's news that Russia has exploded its biggest H-bomb type of nuclear blast to date.

BUT THE NEW Soviet strategy, as seen by American experts viewing the wreckage of this year's Geneva conferences, mixes up the plays like a talented quarterback operating behind a powerful line.

The Kremlin's combined leadership, calling signals for Red China and the Eastern Europe satellites as well as for the Soviet Union, will strengthen local Communist parties, tempt trade-hungry countries with deals they want and need, run guns to troubled areas, give "big brother" encouragement to uneasy neutrals, promise no strings-attached help to underdeveloped areas, and on and on.

All the while, the Soviet leaders are expected to tempt the West, particularly the United States, as the enemy of newly free peoples and as supporters of colonialism.

In the Far East, the pressure takes the form of new Communist threats of warfare. Red Chinese Deputy Premier Chen Yi reported last week about extensive military preparations along the China coast for possible assault on Formosa if talks with U. S. representatives break down.

The Committee on International Policy of the National Planning Assn., reviewing the situation in yesterday, said the cold war is in its "most perilous phase." It called for a courageous and imaginative program.

The association describes itself as a nonprofit, nonpolitical organization devoted to planning by Americans in agriculture, business, labor and the professions.

100 Westinghouse Aides Back On Job

COLUMBUS (AP)—Some 100 of the 200 workers on strike at the Columbus Westinghouse plant returned today to their jobs today in what plant officials called a "back-to-work" movement.

Today marked the sixth week of the strike at the local plant. The IUE-CIO strike has been under way at 30 Westinghouse plants throughout the country.

Sheriffs deputies patrolled the plant area this morning and only one act of violence was reported at a point where pickets were on duty. One automobile had a window smashed.

GOP Chieftain 'Encouraged' About Ike's Second Term

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (AP)—Republican Chairman Leonard W. Hall said today after a meeting with President Eisenhower he now believes Eisenhower will seek a second term "if he feels he is able."

Hall met reporters after holding with the chief executive the first all-out political conference Eisenhower has had since his Sept. 24 heart attack.

The national chairman said Eisenhower's second term plans were not discussed "as a specific situation" at their 45-minute meeting, but he added he felt "very much encouraged" by the meeting.

"I feel better about it (the President's running) after the meeting this morning," Hall said.

Hall said he expected much to depend on late January physical examinations which are supposed to show whether Eisenhower's recovery from his heart attack is complete.

Hall said Eisenhower made no promises about running again: "He didn't say yes and he didn't say no."

White House Educational Meet Opens

WASHINGTON (AP)—American mothers, fathers, teachers, businessmen, a 1,400-member cross section of the population, gathered today for the four-day White House Conference on Education.

Many were loaded with questions on one of the most controversial issues in the educational world today: federal aid to schools, due for discussion Wednesday.

Delegates to 18 of the state conferences preliminary to the national conference took a stand on the question. At several other state meetings it was discussed without recommendation.

Of the 18 conferences, a dozen approved federal aid, but almost every one of these tackled it from a different direction. Some declared for federal aid of any kind, some only for construction assistance, some for federal funds "without strings."

Some approved it in principle "for other states if they need it." Legislation now before Congress calls only for federal aid for school construction, not for operation, teachers' salaries or books.

The conference was called by President Eisenhower nearly a year ago to dig out "the information with which to attack these serious problems" in education. It will take up six main points: school aims, organization, building needs, faculty needs, financing, and public interest in education.

Lutheran Church Defies Synod Rule

BROOKFIELD, Wis. (AP)—The Lutheran congregation of the Rev. Victor K. Wrigley, found guilty by his synod in a heresy trial, voted last night to retain him.

The congregation of Gethsemane Lutheran Church voted 197-18 to keep Pastor Wrigley, despite a recommendation by a trial board of the northwest synod of the United Lutheran Church that he be suspended from his pulpit. Orders carrying out the recommendation were issued by Dr. Paul E. Bishop, Minneapolis, synod president.

Pastor Wrigley, 35, was found guilty by the trial board on five of six counts of doctrinal deviation.

2 U.S. Solons Held 4 Hours By Red Police

2-Way Radio Car In East Berlin Said To Be Violation

BERLIN (AP)—Two American congressmen were held yesterday in the Russian sector of Berlin for more than four hours. The incident challenged Allied occupation rights in this four-power city.

U. S. officials disclosed that East German Communist police detained Rep. Harold C. Ostertag (R-NY), Ostertag's wife, Rep. Edward P. Boland (D-Mass), and their escort officer, Lt. James T. McQueen of Mullins, S. C.

The party was held at pistol point at the Russian war memorial center in Treptow. The German police contended the visitors had violated the laws of the Communist state by using an automobile equipped with a two-way radio.

U. S. authorities said that the Russians supported this claim later in the day when the Americans' release was secured. American officials took this to mean that the laws of the East German republic now could be applied to Allied personnel entering East Berlin. This would in effect weaken, if not destroy, the four-power character of the divided, occupied city.

MAJ. GEN. Charles L. Dasher Jr., U. S. commandant in Berlin, demanded an audience with the Soviet Commandant, Maj. Gen. P. T. Dibrova, to lodge a verbal protest.

Ostertag reported that it was a "harrowing experience for me but I felt it would straighten itself out. It was difficult to understand the delay in getting the word to any responsible authority."

Rep. Boland left by plane this morning for Frankfurt and Naples. The party was touring in an Army sedan of the type used by the U. S. mission accredited to the Soviet zone.

The congressional party crossed into the Soviet sector of Berlin at 11 a. m. and drove to the Red army cemetery, which attracts foreign visitors almost daily.

While the group strolled through the grounds, an East German policeman looked into the parked auto and noted the radio telephone. When the party returned, the policeman demanded the car keys.

The policeman cocked his pistol and when McQueen demanded to know why, he was told: "It is against the laws of the East German democratic republic for a foreign power to have and operate a radio in a vehicle."

McQueen tried to radio his headquarters and a second policeman drew his pistol. The party was then ordered to follow the policeman to a guard shelter where Soviet authorities were notified.

Volunteer Fireman Held As Firebug

MEDIA, Pa. (AP)—Volunteer fireman Edward Bogardus, 24, led police and fire officials on a three-hour tour yesterday of burned Delaware and Chester County buildings to which authorities said he admitted setting fire.

Earle H. Allen, Delaware County chief of detectives, said Bogardus admitted in a written statement he set more than 30 fires. They caused damages estimated at approximately half a million dollars.

The tour was made of several burned barns, two schools, a food market and a $75,000 home.

Weekend Traffic Takes 9 Lives

COLUMBUS (AP)—Prospects for a highly successful Safe Driving period appeared bright today after Ohio's weekend traffic death toll reached a new season low.

Only nine persons were killed on state roads from 6 p. m. Friday to last midnight.

Safe Driving Day will be Thursday, Dec. 1, but the traffic caution campaign began 10 days before that date and will extend for 10 days after S-D Day.

In addition to the weekend traffic deaths, there were six miscellaneous accidental deaths.

3 Women Excommunicated In Church Racial 'Scandal'

ERATH, La. (AP)—The segregation issue flared again today in religious ranks after the excommunication of three Roman Catholics for beating a woman teacher who instructed Negro and white children in the same classroom.

Bishop Jules B. Jeanmard, head of the diocese of Lafayette in southwest Louisiana, said the decree, his first in 33 years as a prelate, was aimed at three women who attacked the teacher.

Excommunication is the severest of punishments issued by the Roman Catholic Church. Any Roman Catholic under such an order is forbidden to receive the sacraments, including confession, holy communion and final rites.

The teacher, Mrs. Lula B. Orteman, filed assault and battery charges against Mrs. Etta B. Romero and Mrs. Lota B. Menard, whom she identified as two of the assailants. The third woman in the attack was not named.

The Rev. Emery Labbe, pastor of Our Lady of Lourdes Church, said his policy was to teach catechism to both white and Negro students in the same classroom.

All catechism teaching stopped this week when Father Labbe said he was informed of more threats of violence if the races were not segregated.

Bishop Jeanmard warned another act of violence would prompt him to close Our Lady of Lourdes. He added that anyone else who threatened violence or interfered with the functions of the church would be automatically excommunicated without notice.

The excommunication decree will stand, he said, until those under punishment "have repaired the scandal they have caused the church."

Archbishop Joseph Francis Rummel of New Orleans suspended services at the St. Cecilia mission in Jesuit Bend, La., Oct. 2 after white parishioners refused to allow a Negro priest to say Mass. The services have not been restored.

Truman Firm In His Opinion Of Vice President Nixon

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The Los Angeles Examiner today quoted one of its reporters as saying former President Harry S. Truman said yesterday of Vice President Richard Nixon:

"I don't even want to discuss that name to me. Don't even mention his name to me." The Los Angeles Times quoted Truman: "I don't like the name and I don't care who knows it."

But Truman denied making the statements. A spokesman at the Beverly Hills home of oilman Edwin Pauley where Truman is staying, quoted the "ex-President" as saying he "would never speak in any such way of anybody holding the office of vice president."

Both newspapers said the quotes were Truman's response at the airport when reporters asked what his reaction would be to Nixon becoming the 1956 Republican candidate for president.

The spokesman quoted Truman as saying he said instead: "You know how I feel so don't talk to me about Mr. Nixon."

TRUMAN ARRIVED by plane from Seattle to address a $100-a-plate banquet tonight to raise funds for the Truman library, now under construction in Independence, Mo.

Reporters also asked Truman if he had any comment on the Denver speech Saturday night by Gov. G. Mennen Williams of Michigan in which Williams attacked Adlai Stevenson's plea that the Democrats use a "moderate" approach to national issues. The governor said Democrats would be "guilty of the most craven cowardice" if

Florida Senator Still Likes Lausche

TAMPA, Fla. (AP)—Adlai Stevenson is finding more favor in the eyes of Sen. Holland (D-Fla.), but Holland says Gov. Frank Lausche of Ohio better meets the requirements for a moderate Democratic presidential candidate.

Holland said yesterday, "He (Stevenson) is moving closer to the standards I think the country needs and the party needs. He may be the best we have, but I still am not sold on him."

In 1952 the senior Florida senator voted for Stevenson and helped raise money for him, but took no active part in the campaign.

He did not elaborate on his selection of Lausche as the leading moderate among Democrats.

Well-Rehearsed Trick Pulled In Detention Unit

2 Escapees Surrender To Police Voluntarily; 2 Others Captured

AKRON (AP)—Deputies nabbed two girls near Akron Airport today in the aftermath of an escape plot which cost the life of an elderly matron at the Summit County Detention Home here.

Last night, five teen-age inmates carried out a well-rehearsed plan to trick the gray-haired matron. They left her bound and gagged, with her bonds so tight she was strangled to death before help arrived.

Two of the girls gave up at police headquarters about an hour and a half after the escape. They were Merl Cain and Margaret Nicholson, both 15.

Detectives quoted the Cain girl as saying her assignment was to grab the matron and keep her from screaming, but she had trouble doing it because the woman had cold cream on her mouth. They quoted the other girl as saying her job was to grab the victim's feet.

A radio broadcast was their first knowledge of the matron's death, they told the police. An acquaintance and the Cain girl's brother talked them into surrendering.

RUTH BEICHLER, 17, and Shirley Shingler, 15, were taken into custody in a restaurant near the airport.

The fifth girl, Mrs. Zelda De Cost, 16, intended to go to Columbus for clothes, they reported. The victim of the escape was Mrs. Eula Bonham, 59, who had been a matron at the home for 16 years. Her body was found on the floor of the dormitory. She had been bound with cloth belts from the print house dresses all the girls wore. A washrag, soaked with ammonia which the girls had been hoarding from the cleaning duties, had been jammed into her mouth.

Coroner W. J. Pittenger said death was caused by strangulation, with suffocation as a possible additional cause.

Mrs. Bonham, whose first marriage ended in divorce, was 59.

Moving Of Books Brings Murder

CHICAGO (AP)—Rubin Thomas, 27, told police he shot and killed his wife Edith, 35, and wounded two of his stepchildren yesterday because they moved his books from the living room to a back porch.

"I don't like cold books," he told police after his arrest. He was held without charge. The stepchildren are expected to recover.

Jews Claiming Job Exclusions Grow

NEW YORK (AP)—The American Jewish Congress says it finds "widespread" job discrimination against Jews and believes the situation might be even worse if the nation were not prosperous and enjoying full employment.

The AJC made its report yesterday on the basis of a nationwide survey conducted for the World Jewish Congress.

The AJC said its survey showed that "Jews are largely excluded from many basic industries, such as commercial banking, automobile manufacturing, shipping and transportation and mining."

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Lucius Beebe's new Pullman car is a many-splendored thing.

The 32-year-old author and publisher says it cost $125,000. It includes three bedrooms, a charreusse kitchen, orange dining room, observation room, loud speaker system, three telephones and a Turkish steam bath.

DROODLES

By ROGER PRICE

In 1932 B.D. (Before Droodles) Dr. Schwine and Dr. Kitzenger opened up a "Little Gypsy Tea Room" and appointed me Head Waiter because I had a pair of colorful Orange Pajamas I could wear. Frankly, I didn't think the location was exactly right (it was next door to a Ship Yard and across the street from a Steel Foundry) and sure enough, our first customer was a riveter from the Ship Yard and he wanted 87 containers of Tea "to go." However he insisted on the free tea leaf reading we offered and Mrs. Schwine had to go with him since she was telling the fortunes. Two months later she sent us a post card from a Destroyer maneuvering with the 7th Fleet in the Pacific, so we changed the name to the "Little Gypsy Hamburg Hut."

GOP Chieftain 'Encouraged' About Ike's Second Term

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (AP)—Republican Chairman Leonard W. Hall said today after a meeting with President Eisenhower he now believes Eisenhower will seek a second term "if he feels he is able."

The national chairman said Eisenhower's second term plans were not discussed "as a specific situation" at their 45-minute meeting, but he added he felt "very much encouraged" by the meeting.

White House Educational Meet Opens

WASHINGTON (AP)—American mothers, fathers, teachers, businessmen, a 1,400-member cross section of the population, gathered today for the four-day White House Conference on Education.

Many were loaded with questions on one of the most controversial issues in the educational world today: federal aid to schools, due for discussion Wednesday. Delegates to 18 of the state conferences preliminary to the national conference took a stand on the question. At several other state meetings it was discussed without recommendation.

Colorado Rattled

PUEBLO, Colo. (AP)—Five southeastern Colorado communities were jarred last night by an earth tremor of undetermined origin. It rattled windows but caused no reported damage.

But Hall offered as his "personal opinion" the comment that "I think he will run if he feels he's able."

The Republican chairman came here this morning to give Eisenhower "a rundown on politics."

"That is all I can say at this time," Hall told reporters as he arrived at the Hotel Gettysburg to have breakfast with White House News Secretary James C. Hagerty.

WHILE HALL breakfasted with Hagerty the President met with Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell on what the White House described as "routine" matters.

Mitchell flew in with Presidential Aide Sherman Adams in the White House Aero Commander.

The meeting with Mitchell had political overtones too, with the merging AFL and CIO set to test their strength next election.

The conference could be devoted to current party problems or could bear on the 1956 decision political figures are waiting to hear: Will Eisenhower run again?

GOP hopes were growing that he would accept renomination. His stepped-up activities in recent days, his appearance of physical well-being and consistently favorable medical reports gave reason for the President's party to cross its fingers, at least.

Eisenhower's message to a Republican National Committee meeting this week also is awaited as a possible clue to his thoughts about seeking a second term.

It will be read to the committee meeting in Chicago Wednesday. The GOP committee has listed Henry Cabot Lodge Jr., American ambassador to the United Nations, Secretary of Commerce Weeks, Secretary of Labor Mitchell and Secretary of Agriculture Benson as chief speakers.

The center of attention will be on Benson, under fire from some Republicans as well as most Democrats in connection with the administration's farm program.

Production Group To Meet Thursday

The annual meeting of the Columbus Production Credit Association for Pickaway and Fairfield Counties will be held in Amanda High School Thursday.

The Eastern Star of Amanda will serve dinner at 7 p. m., followed by entertainment by Mrs. Eva Maass of Columbus, a vocal and accordion specialist. The Rev. Harry G. Yaggi, minister of the Lancaster Grace Evangelical and Reform Church, will deliver an address on the subject, "What Can We Look At?"

This will be the association's 22nd annual meeting serving Pickaway and Fairfield Counties. Don M. Clump has been manager for 18 years.

More than 900 invitations have been mailed to the group's stockholders in the two counties.

3 Take Turns Getting Stuck

His pal, John Lack, 14, went up after him but reached a point, 20 feet away, where it seemed wiser to stand still than go on.

Policeman Sterling La Bare climbed the bluff to survey the situation but found himself in the same predicament.

Finally firemen lowered ropes from the top of the cliff and rescued the three in the order in which they go stuck.

Truman Firm In His Opinion Of Vice President Nixon

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The Los Angeles Examiner today quoted one of its reporters as saying former President Harry S. Truman said yesterday of Vice President Richard Nixon:

"I don't even want to discuss that name. Don't even mention his name to me." The Los Angeles Times quoted Truman: "I don't like the name and I don't care who knows it!"

But Truman denied making the statements. A spokesman at the Beverly Hills home of oilman Edwin Pauley where Truman is staying, quoted the ex-President as saying he "would never speak in any such way of anybody holding the office of vice president."

Both newspapers said the quotes were Truman's response at the airport when reporters asked what his reaction would be to Nixon becoming the 1956 Republican candidate for president.

TRUMAN ARRIVED by plane from Seattle to address a $100-a-plate banquet tonight to raise funds for the Truman library, now under construction in Independence, Mo.

Reporters also asked Truman if he had any comment on the Denver speech Saturday night by Gov. G. Mennen Williams of Michigan in which Williams attacked Adlai Stevenson's plea that the Democrats use a "moderate" approach to national issues. The governor said Democrats would be "guilty of the most craven cowardice" if they allowed the presidential campaign to "degenerate into a spineless and self-defeating formality."

Truman said: "That's good. That's the way Democrats are. They have opinions and they speak their minds."

The former President spoke at a Seattle dinner Saturday night to raise funds for the library to house his papers and other documents. He is scheduled to appear at a third dinner in San Francisco tomorrow.

Pauley said about half of the sum needed for the institution has been raised. The library, when completed, will be given to the government.

TEXAS WIDOW Acquitted In Mate's Death

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP)—A jury acquitted a 47-year-old blonde widow yesterday of paying a gunman to kill her wealthy husband.

Mrs. Mary Clark placed her gloved hands over her face, wept and fell onto the shoulder of her attorney Elvin Tackett after the verdict. Two friends helped her from the courtroom.

William P. Clark was found shot to death May 23, 1953, in his 22-room mansion.

A rifle was found 10 feet from Clark's body but a verdict of suicide was returned. The verdict was changed to murder after a bullet was found in the floor weeks later.

The state, which asked a life sentence for Mrs. Clark, built its case around statements of an ex-convict, Harry Huggins, who is under a murder indictment in the slaying.

Huggins told this story: He and two other ex-convicts who later died in gangland slayings, Tincy Eggleston and Cecil Green, went to the Clark home for what he thought was to be a robbery. Eggleston shot Clark, and told Huggins that Mrs. Clark had offered to pay for the job. Later, Huggins saw Eggleston collect $6,000 from a man and a woman whom he identified as Mrs. Clark.

Mrs. Clark's attorney, Tackett, testified that Huggins told him last spring that Mrs. Clark had nothing to do with the slaying. Another defense witness testified she was attending a funeral at the time of the alleged payoff.

Well-Rehearsed Trick Pulled In Detention Unit

2 Escapees Surrender To Police Voluntarily; 2 Others Captured

AKRON (AP)—Deputies nabbed two girls near Akron Airport today in the aftermath of an escape plot which cost the life of an elderly matron at the Summit County Detention Home here.

Last night, five teen-age inmates carried out a well-rehearsed plan to trick the gray-haired matron. They left her bound and gagged, with her bonds so tight she was strangled to death before help arrived.

Two of the girls gave up at police headquarters about an hour and a half after the escape. They were Merl Cain and Margaret Nicholson, both 15.

Detectives quoted the Cain girl as saying her assignment was to grab the matron and keep her from screaming, but she had trouble doing it because the woman had cold cream on her mouth.

They quoted the other girl as saying her job was to grab the victim's feet.

A radio broadcast was their first knowledge of the matron's death, they told the police. An acquaintance and the Cain girl's brother talked them into surrendering.

RUTH BEICHLER, 17, and Shirley Shingler, 15, were taken into custody in a restaurant near the airport.

The fifth girl, Mrs. Zelda De Cost, 16, intended to go to Columbus for clothes, they reported.

The victim of the escape was Mrs. Eula Bonham, 59, who had been a matron at the home for 16 years. Her body was found on the floor of the dormitory. She had been bound with cloth belts from the print house clothes all the girls wore. A washrag, soaked with ammonia which the girls had been hoarding from the cleaning duties, had been jammed into her mouth.

Coroner W. J. Pittenger said death was caused by strangulation, with suffocation as a possible additional cause.

Mrs. Bonham, whose first marriage ended in divorce, was 59.

In 1932 B.D. (Before Droodles) Dr. Schweine and Dr. Kitzenger opened up a "Little Gypsy Tea Room" and appointed me Head Waiter because I had a pair of colorful Orange Pajamas I could wear. Frankly, I didn't think the location was exactly right (it was next door to a Ship Yard and across the street from a Steel Foundry) and sure enough, our first customer was a riveter from the Ship Yard and he wanted 87 containers of Tea "to go." However he insisted on the free tea leaf reading we offered and Mrs. Schweine had to go with him since she was telling the fortunes. Two months later she sent us a post card from a Destroyer maneuvering with the 7th Fleet in the Pacific, so we changed the name to the "Little Gypsy Hamburg Hut."

Flrigid Blast Gripping Ohio

Delaware's 6 Above Lowest In State Today

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Snow flurries accompanied a cold wave which hit Ohio early today.

Early morning lows included 6 degrees in Delaware, 7 degrees in Cincinnati, Toledo, Mansfield and Dayton, 8 degrees in Washington C. H. (where the mercury dropped 40 degrees during the night), 9 degrees in Columbus, Zanesville and Canton. Chesapeake reported 20 degrees.

The weather bureau reported the cold wave came with strong west to northwest winds. The snow flurries were mostly over the north and east portions of the state. A low tonight of zero to 10 above is predicted.

The frigid blast, termed the most severe of the current autumn season, gripped a vast portion of the nation.

The cold arctic air covered the country from the Rockies to the Appalachians and reached from the Canadian border into the western Gulf states.

The cold snap, said the Weather Bureau, had just about expended its force in the South early today and was moving eastward at about 30 miles per hour.

Cold wave conditions became the rule rather than the exception for most of the Great Lakes and Ohio Valley as well as the middle and upper Mississippi Valley. The cold was accompanied by gusty winds and snow flurries.

Sunday midnight temperatures hovered around the zero mark or below in parts of Wisconsin, Minnesota and North Dakota. Readings of less than 10 above reached as far south as northern Kansas, northern Missouri and central Illinois. At the same time, temperatures dropped to 32 in Dallas and 30 in Memphis.

A mild offshore breeze protected the East Coast, meanwhile, and staved off the cold air.

Woman Named As Designer Of Men's Duds

Many Ladies Long Vocal In Telling Males How To Purchase Clothes

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK (AP) — Men design women's clothes. And now some women are designing men's apparel.

One maker of men's suits has hired a woman to advise retail outlets to encourage women to shop for men's clothing, with the idea that will boost sales volume.

A maker of men's hats has hired a woman to design its new spring line on the theory that a woman would know best how a man should look—so as not to clash with his wife's fashions.

Many women have long been very vocal about telling their men what they ought to wear. Many pick out the clothes on the theory the husband's taste can't be trusted. Others go along as unpaid but certainly not unheard consultants.

But a lot of men resent it and won't permit their wives to choose anything for them.

Some merchants say the wife spurs the husband into spending more on his appearance than he would if he weren't nagged. They report 50 per cent of their sales of men's suits are made while the wife watches.

Other merchants say that the wife just complicates sales, wastes clerk's time, and upsets other and unaccompanied males who may be there shopping.

Some men, who choose their own suits, are content to let the women do the shopping for shirts, underwear, socks, pajamas and the like, after establishing the fundamental rules of what the husband will stand for and what sizes and colors he demands. Merchants say 70 per cent of such items are bought by women.

Wives aware that laziness is the husband's real motivating reason, are nevertheless content themselves—if it's sometimes possible to find a $4 shirt the husband can't tell from the $5 one he is used to, and that extra unreported $1 can go towards some apparel brace a brat for the wife's wardrobe.

The men's clothing manufacturer (H. Daroff & Sons) that hired a woman to tell retail outlets how to appeal to the women and get them to buy more apparel for their men, also had a research organization query women shoppers on the subject. The firm holds that the men's wear industry must find out what motivates women buyers's of mens duds.

More than a third of the women shoppers said, "everything is left up to me." But a half said style was specified, though less rarely was branded and color mentioned.

The women said when they went along with their husbands they were listened to on the matter of fit, but seldom consulted about fabric, color, brand or price.

The hat maker (Frank H. Lee Co.) that hired a woman designer (Miss Caye Christie) for its forthcoming spring line says it did so because "women are natural coordinators and should help coordinate their men's clothes." The spring line, they say, will "show women the hats they'd like to see men wear."

But a lot of men aren't sold on the idea of women getting into the act. And a lot of merchants aren't either.

One merchant, head of famous conservative store, (Brooks Bros.) says: "We deal in what a man should wear—not in what some women think he should wear."

Ohio Farmers Rate High In Buying

WASHINGTON (AP)—Ohio farmers are expected to buy $270 million worth of electrical equipment in the next five years.

That estimate, made today by the Rural Electrification Administration, places Ohio as the fourth biggest market in the nation for these products.

riage ended in divorce years ago, had planned to be married Thursday to an Akron rubber worker, Everett Jones, 60.

An acquaintance of the Cain girl found them, with Ruth Beichler, 17, and Shirley Shingler, 15, shivering without coats near a restaurant. He advised all of them to surrender and took them to the Cain girl's home, where her brother gave them the same advice.

En route to police headquarters, two of the girls balked, and left the car at a skating rink.

Today Sharon Misia, 15, of Barberton, told police that last Saturday she pretended to be the matron while the five girls rehearsed their escape attempt. They grabbed her and bound her. She said that although she helped in the rehearsal, she had no intention of joining the flight.

From four other girls left behind in the dormitory, police learned the escapees got the matron to unlock their door by asking her to bring them a scarf one had left downstairs.

When the matron entered the dormitory, the five attacked her and bore her to the floor where they bound her. The belts were tied so tightly that another attendant, Dorothy Matson, was unable to loosen them. A male attendant, Ralph Roebuck, 29, finally cut the belts with a knife.

Roebuck heard the scuffle overhead while he was supervising a group of 29 boy inmates as they watched television in a recreation room. He found the five girls crawling out the smashed window, but did not chase them, fearing the boys would try to escape, too.

Four of the escapees were from Akron. Police said the fifth, Mrs. De Cost, was the wife of a fugitive who had escaped from a prison in West Virginia. She was arrested here last Nov. 25 in the hope she would tell the whereabouts of her husband.

Shirley Shingler and Margaret Nicholson were put in the institution after they ran away from home several times. Merl Cain was involved in the knife-point robbery of a man's wallet. Ruth Beichler was brought here from the Girls Industrial School at Delaware to testify in the trial of a man accused of contributing to her delinquency.

Third Of Ohio's Counties Now In Financial Difficulty

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—One-third of Ohio's 88 counties are in financial difficulty because they can't meet their money needs; another third are on the "close edge" of financial difficulty and the others are in good shape.

That's the opinion of Ferd F. Becker, chief of the county affairs division of the state department of taxation. He says some of the counties are "practically bankrupt."

Some counties that one or two years ago were well off financially now are having difficulty in meeting demands being made upon them for services, he said.

One reason so many counties have problems, he said, is because Ohio has been growing so fast.

"Basically, our population is increasing and the demands made upon local officials is more rapid than the increase in revenue to meet those needs," he explains. "This is true in cities, counties and school districts."

"In my opinion, we have to recognize that problem and the proper approach is to have each branch of local government — counties, townships, cities and schools — make a serious study of their needs and services which must be furnished, as well as of the revenues to be obtained to meet those increased services."

"We must also consider," he went on, "how far we can go in furnishing services for individuals, and whether there is a responsibility by government for giving such services."

The financial problems, according to Becker, built up during the years that followed adoption of a constitutional amendment in 1933 that cut tax limitation on real estate from 15 to 10 mills for each $1 of valuation. The amendment let county budget commissions set up their allocation of millage on the basis of two-thirds of the average millage allowed for various services during the five-year period from 1929 through 1933.

And here's how it worked out. Counties in 1915 received 24.20 per cent of all general property taxes. For the money year ended June 30, 1953, they got only 13.32 per cent.

Many counties now are operating on less than two mills. Lowest is Putnam County with only 1.30 mills, and the highest is Pike County with 4.20 mills.

After providing for two-thirds of the rate under the 15-mill levy, which is in the nature of mandated allocations, budget commissions must take into account two other allocations.

They include a half-mill for solidiers' relief if requested and .15 mill for the care of needy children. This would further reduce by .65 mill for the available operating millage for the counties.

And Becker believes general indifference of the taxpayers to the especially tax officials, is a major factor that contributes to the current money pinch.

There are 15,407 taxing authorities in the state, in addition to the Legislature. They include county commissioners, city councils, township trustees and boards of education.

"People want something for nothing," Becker said. "I think it is a serious problem. Our local government should be on a high plane, and it is when the people take enough interest to place competent people in charge of their affairs. If county government breaks down, then the whole system of local government is responsible for the levy, collection and distribution of property taxes."

What's the solution to money problems of the counties? Becker sees two possibilities.

"We must get a financial report from each of the 88 counties and get an accurate picture of the needs, demands and available revenue — and give that to the Legislature."

The other also involves the Legislature. He said:

"The General Assembly could help themselves by either reducing the vote requirement from 60 per cent to a majority vote on levies for current expenses of the counties or increase the fees on the amount of taxes collected, to provide the necessary funds to appraise property, and for the assessing, levying, collection and distribution of taxes."

He came within a single point of being top man in the high-caliber competition.

Now home on leave, Walker will begin an assignment aboard the big aircraft carrier Coral Sea when he returns to duty December 5.

Woman Named As Designer Of Men's Duds

Many Ladies Long Vocal In Telling Males How To Purchase Clothes

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK (AP) — Men design women's clothes. And now some women are designing men's apparel.

One maker of men's suits has hired a woman to advise retail outlets to encourage women to shop for men's clothing, with the idea that will boost sales volume.

A maker of men's hats has hired a woman to design its new spring line on the theory that a woman would know best how a man should look—so as not to clash with his wife's fashions.

Many women have long been very vocal about telling their men what they ought to wear. Many pick out the clothes on the theory the husband's taste can't be trusted. Others go along as unpaid but certainly not unheard consultants.

But a lot of men resent it and won't permit their wives to choose anything for them.

Some merchants say the wife spurs the husband into spending more on his appearance then he would if he weren't nagged. They report 50 per cent of their sales of men's suits are made while the wife watches.

Other merchants say that the wife just complicates sales, wastes clerk's time, and upsets other and unaccompanied males who may be there shopping.

Some men, who choose their own suits, are content to let the women do the shopping for shirts, underwear, socks, pajamas and the like, after establishing the fundamental rules of what the husband will stand for and what sizes and colors he demands. Merchants say 70 per cent of such items are bought by women.

Wives aware that laziness is the husband's real motivating reason, are nevertheless content themselves—it's sometimes possible to find a $4 shirt the husband can't tell from the $5 one he is used to, and that extra unreported $1 can go towards some apparel bric-a-brac for the wife's wardrobe.

The men's clothing manufacturer (H. Daroff & Sons) that hired a woman to tell retail outlets how to appeal to the women and get them to buy more apparel for their men, also had a research organization query women shoppers on the subject. The firm holds that the men's wear industry must find out what motivates women buyers's of men's duds.

More than a third of the women shoppers said, "everything is left up to me." But a half said style was specified, though less rarely was branded and color mentioned.

The women said when they went along with their husbands they were listened to on the matter of fit, but seldom consulted about fabric, color, brand or price.

The hat maker (Frank H. Lee Co.) that hired a woman designer (Miss Caye Christie) for its forthcoming spring line says it did so because "women are natural coordinators and should help coordinate their men's clothes." The spring line, they say, will "show women the hats they'd like to see men wear."

But a lot of men aren't sold on the idea of women getting into the act. And a lot of merchants aren't either.

One merchant, head of famous conservative store, (Brooks Bros.) says: "We deal in what a man should wear—not in what some women think he should wear."

Ohio Farmers Rate High In Buying

WASHINGTON (AP)—Ohio farmers are expected to buy $270 million worth of electrical equipment in the next five years.

That estimate, made today by the Rural Electrification Administration, places Ohio as the fourth biggest market in the nation for these products.

riage ended in divorce years ago, had planned to be married Thursday to an Akron rubber worker, Everett Jones, 60.

An acquaintance of the Cain girl found them, with Ruth Beichler, 17, and Shirley Shingler, 15, shivering without coats near a restaurant. He advised all of them to surrender and took them to the Cain girl's home, where her brother gave them the same advice.

En route to police headquarters, two of the girls balked, and left the car at a skating rink.

Today Sharon Misjia, 15, of Barberton, told police that last Saturday she pretended to be the matron while the five girls rehearsed their escape attempt. They grabbed her and bound her. She said that although she helped in the rehearsal, she had no intention of joining the flight.

From four other girls left behind in the dormitory, police learned the escapees got the matron to unlock their door by asking her to bring them a scarf one had left downstairs.

When the matron entered the dormitory, the five attacked her and bore her to the floor where they bound her. The belts were tied so tightly that another attendant, Dorothy Matson, was unable to loosen them. A male attendant, Ralph Roebuck, 29, finally cut the belts with a knife.

Roebuck heard the scuffle overhead while he was supervising a group of 29 boy inmates as they watched television in a recreation room. He found the five girls crawling out the smashed window, but did not chase them, fearing the boys would try to escape, too.

Four of the escapees were from Akron. Police said the fifth, Mrs. De Cost, was the wife of a fugitive who had escaped from a prison in West Virginia. She was arrested here last Nov. 25 in the hope she would tell the whereabouts of her husband.

Shirley Shingler and Margaret Nicholson were put in the institution after they ran away from home several times. Merl Cain was involved in the knife-point robbery of a man's wallet. Ruth Beichler was brought here from the Girls Industrial School at Delaware to testify in the trial of a man accused of contributing to her delinquency.

Third Of Ohio's Counties Now In Financial Difficulty

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—One-third of Ohio's 88 counties are in financial difficulty because they can't meet their money needs; another third are on the "close edge" of financial difficulty and the others are in good shape.

That's the opinion of Ferd F. Becker, chief of the county affairs division of the state department of taxation. He says some of the counties are "practically bankrupt."

Some counties that one or two years ago were well off financially now are having difficulty in meeting demands being made upon them for services, he said.

One reason so many counties have problems, he said, is because Ohio has been growing so fast.

"Basically, our population is increasing and the demands made upon local officials is more rapid than the increase in revenue to meet those needs," he explains. "This is true in cities, counties and school districts."

"In my opinion, we have to recognize that problem and the proper approach is to have each branch of local government — counties, townships, cities and schools — make a serious study of their needs and services which must be furnished, as well as of the revenues to be obtained to meet those increased services."

"We must also consider," he went on, "how far we can go in furnishing services for individuals, and whether there is a responsibility by government for giving such services."

The financial problems, according to Becker, built up during the years that followed adoption of a constitutional amendment in 1933 that cut tax limitation on real estate from 15 to 10 mills for each $1 of valuation. The amendment let county budget commissions set up their allocation of millage on the basis of two-thirds of the average millage allowed for various services during the five-year period from 1929 through 1933.

And here's how it worked out. Counties in 1915 received 24.20 per cent of all general property taxes. For the money year ended June 30, 1953, they got only 13.32 per cent.

Many counties now are operating on less than two mills. Lowest is Putnam County with only 1.30 mills, and the highest is Pike County with 4.20 mills.

After providing for two-thirds of the rate under the 15-mill levy, which is in the nature of mandated allocations, budget commissions must take into account two other allocations.

They include a half-mill for soldiers' relief if requested and .15

mill for the care of needy children. This would further reduce by .65 mill for the available operating millage for the counties.

And Becker believes general indifference of the taxpayers to the especially tax officials, is a major factor that contributes to the current money pinch.

There are 15,407 taxing authorities in the state, in addition to the Legislature. They include county commissioners, city councils, township trustees and boards of education.

"People want something for nothing," Becker said. "I think it is a serious problem. Our local government should be on a high plane, and it is when the people take enough interest to place competent people in charge of their affairs. If county government breaks down, then the whole system of local government is responsible for the levy, collection and distribution of property taxes."

What's the solution to money problems of the counties? Becker sees two possibilities. "We must get a financial report from each of the 88 counties and get an accurate picture of the needs, demands and available revenue — and give that to the Legislature."

The other also involves the Legislature. He said:

"The General Assembly could help themselves by either reducing the vote requirement from 60 per cent to a majority vote on levies for current expenses of the counties or increase the fees on the amount of taxes collected, to provide the necessary funds to appraise property, and for the assessing, levying, collection and distribution of taxes."

Harry E. Walker, aerographer's mate airman, USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Walker of 349 Watt St., ranked among the top 10 percent of the November 18 graduating class at the Aerographer's Mate School, Naval Air Technical Training Unit in Lakehurst, N. J.

He came within a single point of being top man in the high-caliber competition.

Now home on leave, Walker will begin an assignment aboard the big aircraft carrier Coral Sea when he returns to duty December 5.

Before entering the service in November of last year, Walker was graduated from Stoutsville High School and was employed by the Warren Teed Pharmaceutical Manufacturing Company in Columbus.

"Mary Haworth's Mail"

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a boy 15, and I have a very big problem about my family. I come from a family with no real feeling for life. Since I was small, my parents never seemed to care about the family. I have two brothers and two sisters.

My father seems to think all he has to do is go to work, eat and sleep. He never cares what we do. He never goes to see me play ball. He just doesn't seem to enjoy being with us.

I don't care about myself; it is my 9-year-old brother I care about. He isn't getting the love of my parents that he needs so badly. We are all very nervous about the situation.

My sisters are over 21, and still living with us; but they are always out having a good time. I guess they are like our parents; they don't care about the problem. In the past they tried to tell my mother and father of their mistakes, but my parents wouldn't listen. So my sisters just learned to live with the situation. But I am not going to be like them.

Worries About Brother
Maybe my sisters don't need love, but my young brother and I do. That is why God lets parents have children—to love them. If parents can't love children, they shouldn't have any.

Then my father complains that we don't listen to him. Like when he wants my young brother to go to bed. Instead of putting his foot down, my father just keeps saying "Get to bed"—over and over again; and it drives us crazy listening to him.

In other words, our family is one big mess. All I can say is, if some day I get married and have children, and it happens that I can't love kids as normal people should, I wish God would strike me dead.

P. D.
DEAR P. D.: Many goodhearted parents love their children loyally, to the best of their ability—according to the talents and opportunities they have—and at the same time are bored by the children's childhood activities. And I think that most fathers are probably less closely interested in children's pursuits than mothers are.

In the animal kingdom as well as in human society, the father's prime function when offspring are small is to provide an oasis of security for the mother, wherein she may take care of the young. A father's devotion to children doesn't necessarily include comradely sharing their "child's world" of interests.

However, the postwar generation of parents (since the mid-1940s) seems to be changing the pattern of family teamwork somewhat. Whether the change will be permanent, I don't know. At any rate, many new fathers nowadays are regularly helping in the kitchen and nursery (thus getting close to the kids), in exchange for wage earning help from the mother, as soon as possible after childbirth. These fathers aren't being sentimental, so much as they are being practical. The latterday costs of decent family support often require two average salaries to keep bills paid.

Inside Story
In accusing your parents of emotional neglect and complaining that the family is "one big mess," you don't give details to sustain the charges. So I don't know what the problem is; and maybe it's not what you think. Maybe you are simply giving typical adolescent account of yourself—suddenly finding your parents intolerably unsatisfactory, for all sorts of fancied reasons that don't get at the roots of your upset.

Your dad (as described) sounds like an easygoing sort, whose children at least have some leeway in getting grown. Also he sounds like a tired, discouraged man, tied to a treadmill routine of "work, eat and sleep." You, on the other hand, sound emotionally vigorous, full of love-feeling that cries for recognition and reciprocation. So I take it you aren't a cold fish, afraid of closeness—as you might be, if your parents were as loveless as you imply.

On the basis of your letter, my advice is: If you want loving notice from parents, be lovable and considerate. Make them as happy as you can. Tell your brother (for me) to get to bed the first time he is told; or to go at the proper time without being told. Don't be a nuisance, staying up, keeping Dad nagging irritably at him. Both of you: Listen, when your parents speak, and obey quickly and cheerfully. You'll feel better, doing so; and they are sure to like you more.

Half Of Girl Quads Die In Bellevue Clinic

BELLEVUE, Ohio (P)—Double graveside services will be held today for two of the four quadruplet daughters born early Saturday to Mr. and Mrs. Martin Briel at the Cleveland.

Diane, at 15 ounces, the smallest of the infants, died yesterday almost 24 hours after her birth. Last to be born, she died after the largest of her sisters, Christine, who weighed four pounds one ounce had died Saturday after some 13 hours of life.

The two survivors "are doing as good as can be expected under the circumstances," said aides at Bellevue Hospital, where three of the infants were born. The first infant was delivered without a physician at the home of Briel's mother.

The 25-year-old mother, told of the two deaths, was reported "doing well." She had been expecting twins in January, and began giving birth without much warning.

Still unnamed are the two surviving babies, whose weight has been estimated at 2½ to 3 pounds. They remain in incubators. Briel, 30, is a mechanical engineer working at the General Electric Co. in Cleveland. The couple has a 15-month-old son, James.

"Mary Haworth's Mail"

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a boy 15, and I have a very big problem about my family. I come from a family with no real feeling for life. Since I was small, my parents never seemed to care about the family. I have two brothers and two sisters.

My father seems to think all he has to do is go to work, eat and sleep. He never cares what we do. He never goes to see me play ball. He just doesn't seem to enjoy being with us.

I don't care about myself; it is my 9-year-old brother I care about. He isn't getting the love of my parents that he needs so badly. We are all very nervous about the situation.

My sisters are over 21, and still living with us; but they are always out having a good time. I guess they are like our parents; they don't care about the problem. In the past they tried to tell my mother and father of their mistakes, but my parents wouldn't listen. So my sisters just learned to live with the situation. But I am not going to be like them.

Worries About Brother
Maybe my sisters don't need love, but my young brother and I do. That is why God lets parents have children—to love them. If parents can't love children, they shouldn't have any.

Then my father complains that we don't listen to him. Like when he wants my young brother to go to bed. Instead of putting his foot down, my father just keeps saying "Get to bed"—over and over again; and it drives us crazy listening to him.

In other words, our family is one big mess. All I can say is, if some day I get married and have children, and it happens that I can't love kids as normal people should, I wish God would strike me dead.

P. D.
DEAR P. D.: Many goodhearted parents love their children loyally, to the best of their ability—according to the talents and opportunities they have—and at the same time are bored by the children's childhood activities. And I think that most fathers are probably less closely interested in children's pursuits than mothers are.

In the animal kingdom as well as in human society, the father's prime function when offspring are small is to provide an oasis of security for the mother, wherein she may take care of the young. A father's devotion to children doesn't necessarily include comradely sharing their "child's world" of interests.

However, the postwar generation of parents (since the mid-1940s) seems to be changing the pattern of family teamwork somewhat. Whether the change will be permanent, I don't know. At any rate, many new fathers nowadays are regularly helping in the kitchen and nursery (thus getting close to the kids), in exchange for wage earning help from the mother, as soon as possible after childbirth. These fathers aren't being sentimental, so much as they are being practical. The latterday costs of decent family support often require two average salaries to keep bills paid.

Inside Story
In accusing your parents of emotional neglect and complaining that the family is "one big mess," you don't give details to sustain the charges. So I don't know what the problem is; and maybe it's not what you think. Maybe you are simply giving typical adolescent account of yourself—suddenly finding your parents intolerably unsatisfactory, for all sorts of fancied reasons that don't get at the roots of your upset.

Your dad (as described) sounds like an easygoing sort, whose children at least have some leeway in getting grown. Also he sounds like a tired, discouraged man, tied to a treadmill routine of "work, eat and sleep." You, on the other hand, sound emotionally vigorous, full of love-feeling that cries for recognition and reciprocation. So I take it you aren't a cold fish, afraid of closeness—as you might be, if your parents were as loveless as you imply.

On the basis of your letter, my advice is: If you want loving notice from parents, be lovable and considerate. Make them as happy as you can. Tell your brother (for me) to get to bed the first time he is told; or to go at the proper time without being told. Don't be a nuisance, staying up, keeping Dad nagging irritably at him. Both of you: Listen, when your parents speak, and obey quickly and cheerfully. You'll feel better, doing so; and they are sure to like you more.

Half Of Girl Quads Die In Bellevue Clinic

BELLEVUE, Ohio (P)—Double graveside services will be held today for two of the four quadruplet daughters born early Saturday to Mr. and Mrs. Martin Briel Jr. of Cleveland.

Diane, at 15 ounces, the smallest of the infants, died yesterday almost 24 hours after her birth.

Last to be born, she died after the largest of her sisters, Christine, who weighed four pounds one ounce had died Saturday after some 13 hours of life.

The two survivors "are doing as good as can be expected under the circumstances," said aides at Bellevue Hospital, where three of the infants were born. The first infant was delivered without a physician at the home of Briel's mother.

The 25-year-old mother, told of the two deaths, was reported "doing well." She had been expecting twins in January, and began giving birth without much warning.

Still unnamed are the two surviving babies, whose weight has been estimated at 2½ to 3 pounds. They remain in incubators.

"INVENTING" AUTOMOBILES

EVERY FEW years someone announces "invention" of a revolutionary automobile and the grapevine operating in uninformed—to put it mildly—circles pulsates with rumors that the outlook for General Motors, Ford and Chrysler is indeed dark. They have been caught asleep at the switch, according to the scuttlebutt.

Remember Durant, Tucker, Kaiser, etc.? The name of the latest "wonder car," presumably, will be Ferguson. Anyway, Harry Ferguson, British inventor, says he is ready to produce a "revolutionary" motor car. Dispatches from Detroit say the auto capital remains relatively calm, however.

Not that Detroit automobile manufacturers claim that the automobile has reached its limit of perfectibility. They intend to continue to perfect it year by year. Their competing research departments have standing orders to neglect nothing that could lead to a better automobile.

But they smile at the claim that Ferguson's "new principle" is one that all future road vehicles must and will copy. They say they can guess what it is.

Visiting Detroit five years ago, Ferguson hinted out loud that he was onto something of interest to the whole industry. It was a form of hydraulic drive which would have been novel only if someone proposed to manufacture it. The idea—pumping fluid to turbines built into each of the four wheels—has been kicking around Detroit for a decade or more.

Experimental versions built in this country lacked the zip and go demanded by American drivers. It was found wanting in efficiency generally. So nobody in Detroit is holding his breath until details of Ferguson's "revolutionary" car are forthcoming from London.

BLINKETY-BLANK

NEWS FROM London emphasizes that the British, in their shy way, do not entertain high regard for the flirtatious wink. As a result, public indignation is building up over "winking" turn signals on cars now cruising the island's roads.

The whole matter received a going-over in the staid old House of Commons a few days ago. Minister of Transport John Boyd-Carpenter was asked by a member how much longer drivers will be compelled to put up with the nuisance of "these blinking lights."

His interrogator feared "the stage will be reached when nearly everything and everybody is blinking at everything and everybody else with intolerable consequences." What these might be, he did not elaborate.

The unblinking Transport Minister said he is awaiting a report on the matter of deblinking the nation. This exasperated several Commons members who pointed out that 33,000 new flashing cars go on the roads each day.

Which are a lot of blankety-blanks.

'OLD-FASHIONED' WINTER?

WEATHER TO which the country has been subjected in recent days has had the effect of silencing, at least temporarily, those who for years have insisted that

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

When Robert M. Hutchins of the Ford Foundation's Fund for the Republic appeared on "Meet the Press," he had a very tough time with the correspondents who questioned him. On this, as on most such programs, there is often a sympathetic newsman who tries to be so fair that he leans over backward to help the man on the spot.

It is significant that on this occasion, Hutchins stood alone and the reason may be that he created animosity by his answers which too often dodged the issue. For instance, this colloquy between Robert Hutchins and Frederick Woltman is to the point with regard to the employment of one who took the plea of the Fifth Amendment to a question involving Communism:

"Woltman: Would you also hire a Nazi or a Fascist, or a Ku Klux Klanner?"

"Hutchins: This question is a real flying saucer."

"Woltman: Well you didn't answer it."

"Hutchins: I beg your pardon, I did."

"Woltman: You would also hire a Nazi?"

"Hutchins: No, I didn't say I would."

"Woltman: I'm sorry; I thought you said you would hire a Communist."

"Hutchins: No, I said the great question always is what is the individual in himself? This is the American principle, therefore the question cannot be answered. The question is what is this individual, what is this job that you wish him to undertake?"

"Woltman: Do you believe with the Supreme Court that the Communist Party is a conspiracy to overthrow our democratic form of government?"

"Hutchins: I certainly do."

"Woltman: So if a person arrived in your office who was a member of the Communist Party, known member of the Communist Party, you would disregard that?"

"Hutchins: Not at all, not at all; this is an absolutely relevant fact. The question remains you're perfectly familiar with the enormous number of voluntary organizations that there are in the United States and you're perfectly familiar with the enormous infinite great many gradations in membership and knowledge of the purposes of these organizations; I merely say that the theoretical, the flying saucer that you have hurled does not decide any questions because the ultimate issue is what is this individual in himself? This is the American principle."

"Woltman: Well would you still say whether you would knowingly hire a member of the Communist Party?"

"Hutchins: This question cannot be answered in those terms."

What Hutchins wanted to say was that he would and did hire such a person if he could use his services, but he permitted himself to get so involved that he failed to make this point. This is characteristic of the entire broadcast.

I have a transcript of that broadcast and have studied it carefully. I have read the references to Earl Browder and an examination of Hutchins by Lawrence Spivak on the subject of blacklisting. From the words as taken down stenographically, it is possible to reach two conclusions:

"winters aren't what they used to be." In some recent winters those who sought to contradict this assumption were hard-pressed for temperature figures to buttress their argument.

But if this doesn't develop into an "old-fashioned" winter, it is at least starting out like one. All time low temperatures for this period have been registered in many areas. Officially, of course, it's still fall. Winter doesn't begin until December 21, according to the calendar. But this year, in some sections of the country, it seems to have jumped the gun.

Thankful For Turkey Hash?

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—Whatever happened to the old-fashioned Thanksgiving?

The formal religious quality of Thanksgiving seems almost to have disappeared. A minister here estimated that only one of ten people went to church on the holiday this year.

Somehow that doesn't seem as bad to me as it does to the minister.

There are many days of the year in which men pay gratitude to their Lord in church. But Thanksgiving is a more personal time, when a man's God can be thought of as leaving a candlelit, prayer-loud cathedral to go out of doors and see his people taking his gifts of food and wine while they laugh out loud.

It is the informal religious quality of Thanksgiving that is important, but time seems slowly draining it away, too.

We are so overburdened with plenty that many regard Thanksgiving as a chore rather than a celebration. We groan, "God, the turkey'll be on the table for days and days."

The yen is for a slimmer, smaller bird that won't last on the plate so long. Some heathen voices are even heard to moan, "I don't like turkey."

Don't like turkey? A man might just as well quibble about how the sun shines on America.

The turkey is more native to this land than any treasonous voice raised against it. It fed the people in a time when hunger was a problem and plenty hadn't yet become an ordeal.

The splendid fat silhouette of the turkey is America's oldest symbol of abundant fruitfulness. The owl cries "who-o-o," but the turkey says "gobble, gobble!" And that appetizing exclamation forecasts his own fate.

What really happened to the old-fashioned Thanksgiving? In the city it too often has lost its country flavor, the savor of the land.

Thanksgiving is the holiday of the year that most has the rich taste of the earth about it. It is above all days a celebration of the joys of the stomach. It is a full belly against the empty threat of winter. It has a cider tang.

Mankind has hungered so many generations in so many places in the dark. Thanksgiving Day is America's bounteous answer. It is a long feast that usually begins in sunlight and at the close is lit by candles. The sun doesn't really set on Thanksgiving Day. It just creeps off.

God Himself walked among His people in this land last Thanksgiving Day and whispered a saying as old as the old world itself: "Good appetite!" It was a day when eating was a form of worship.

So for days after Thanksgiving you have to eat turkey hash? More than two thirds of the race of mankind cannot know the wealth of turkey hash because they never even see the turkey!

CHAPTER FORTY-ONE

"SO THAT'S why Paula called me Roger," Clyde said, dazed by the revelation that he was Roger's son, but applying his new knowledge first to his obsessive love. "Because I look enough like him so that she noticed it when she was drugged."

"Your eyes and your coloring are Bessie," Jane said, "but your size, your features are a lot like Roger's. That's why Bessie kept you away after you grew up. There isn't a startling resemblance and your expression and personality are completely different. Still, if a person had any reason to suspect the relationship there'd be little doubt. And, Clyde—Roger never knew you existed, that is, he never knew you were his son until you came back from the army. When you were younger you looked so much like your mother. I saw Roger in New York a month ago and he told me then. He was heart sick. He always wanted children. If he had only known before—"

"Did he desert my mother?" Clyde asked.

"It wasn't like that," Jane said. "It was—one of those things. Roger was always attracted to women and Bessie—she wasn't a pretty girl; no one noticed her. And she—made the advances." As he started to speak she went on quickly, "These aren't nice things to say but it's long past time to have a little fresh air and truth on this situation. Bessie found out Roger was sorry for her and she hated him for that. Poor Roger! His compassion brought him so much unhappiness and created so much for others. But Bessie never told him about the baby. And she wanted desperately to conceal from Albert the fact that the boy was not his own. Roger introduced them and Albert married Bessie right after she broke with Roger. He never knew Clyde was not his own boy."

Shandy bent over, cutting the cord that tied the boy's hands. "What were you up to out there in the garden?" he asked curiously.

"Don't think of it that way. To

ly. And then answered his own question. "Oh, of course, you were trying to keep me from catching Bessie."

Lois started to speak, checked herself and met Jane's eyes. Clyde tugged at the cord on his ankles. "Cut them," he said. "Let me get up."

"No," Lois cried warningly. "No, don't let him go yet. Follow Bessie. Hurry, Shandy, hurry!" He pounded across the lawn to the Kibbee cottage. The door was wide open. The living room was empty. In the bedroom Bessie was saying, "Albert, I have to do it. But I love you."

After a horrified glance, Shandy hurried himself across the room. Bessie, tears pouring down her cheeks, was holding a pillow on top of Albert's face. And over his light pajamas Albert wore a black velvet housecoat.

"Congratulations," Mignonne said over the telephone. "It's a superb job. One of your best. Roger Brindle's readers will love it and one of the major book clubs has been asking for it. Partly because of the publicity, of course. Anyhow, I'm getting you a cut on the book club. And I have a wonderful assignment for you."

"No," Lois said quickly. "No more jobs. I'm going to be married."

"But this one—"

"There's some one at the door," Lois put down the telephone and admitted an elderly messenger with a long box of flowers bearing Shandy's card and a phrase in his writing that brought color into her face.

Jane Brindle, sitting at a window of Lois' Murray Hill apartment, smiled. "Love agrees with you. And with Shandy. I've never seen such a change in a man. I'm so happy for you both."

Lois stepped over suitcases, tissue paper, and boxes in the cluttered room to find vases. While she arranged the flowers she said soberly, "And yet this happiness has grown out of Roger's death. It—"

"Don't think of it that way. To know that, even indirectly, he had a part in such happiness—Roger was really good, Lois. Mistaken, yes. But good in a way Albert could never have understood. Warmly, humanly good. Compassionate. While Albert—"

Lois set the vases of fragrant deep red roses on the table. "Jane, did you know from the beginning that it was Albert Kibbee who had killed Roger?"

"I guessed from the moment I got Helen Thomas' anonymous letter. Helen, of course, thought Carol had done it to be free to marry Doc. But I was afraid because, just a month earlier, I had seen Roger in New York. He told me then about Clyde. The boy had been home only a week but by that time Roger was convinced he was his son. There were so many points of resemblance. Roger was heart-sick, not only because he had neglected his boy. And then he could not help worrying for fear Albert would see what he had seen."

"But to kill him for a thing done more than twenty years before."

"It was more complicated than that," Jane leaned back in her chair, her hands clasped lightly on her lap. "Albert broke up our marriage. I have wondered ever since if I could have prevented it but the thing was so insidious."

Albert, she explained, had been a little man with a big dream. A dream of perfection. He had set his heart on the ministry and he had failed not once, but over and over. His voice, his appearance, an inexorable vein of iron that made him as ruthless with his parishioners as with himself defeated his purpose.

"What he wanted," Jane explained, "was to worship God perfectly. He is partly a mystic, partly a child, with enormous potentialities for good. So long as he believed in good, that is. But a child—there is nothing so cruel, Lois, nothing so hard of heart as a child."

Easing The Burden Of Some Illnesses

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

KIDS get a treat when they go to the Children's Hospital of Philadelphia for urinary tract X-rays.

Drs. John W. Hope and Francisco Campsey are using carbonated beverages in the picture taking.

Children are given nothing to eat for ten to twelve hours prior to the visit to the hospital. Upon their arrival, a preliminary X-ray is taken.

Overlaying Shadows

Then the youngsters are given from six to 12 ounces of a beverage. Generally, within 15 minutes to half an hour, the gas has distended the stomach enough to push away from the kidneys all overlaying shadows. And a clear picture is made.

The method does not work on youngsters over the age of eight. If you are like most of us, you don't chew hard enough, say two Columbia University dentists.

Drs. Haas H. Neumann and Nicholas A. Di Salvo report that chewing tough, solid food probably will help prevent dental decay better than our modern balanced diets.

Teeth depend upon frequent depression and a stress of about 150 pounds to resist decay, the dentists report. Modern meals, although nutritious, seldom call for more than 50 pounds of pressure, they say.

From their point of view, Drs. Neumann and Di Salvo say that a "hero sandwich" is just about ideal.

"INVENTING" AUTOMOBILES

EVERY FEW years someone announces "invention" of a revolutionary automobile and the grapevine operating in uninformed—to put it mildly—circles pulsates with rumors that the outlook for General Motors, Ford and Chrysler is indeed dark. They have been caught asleep at the switch, according to the scuttlebutt.

Remember Durant, Tucker, Kaiser, etc.? The name of the latest "wonder car," presumably, will be Ferguson. Anyway, Harry Ferguson, British inventor, says he is ready to produce a "revolutionary" motor car. Dispatches from Detroit say the auto capital remains relatively calm, however.

Not that Detroit automobile manufacturers claim that the automobile has reached its limit of perfectibility. They intend to continue to perfect it year by year. Their competing research departments have standing orders to neglect nothing that could lead to a better automobile.

But they smile at the claim that Ferguson's "new principle" is one that all future road vehicles must and will copy. They say they can guess what it is.

Visiting Detroit five years ago, Ferguson hinted out loud that he was onto something of interest to the whole industry. It was a form of hydraulic drive which would have been novel only if someone proposed to manufacture it. The idea—pumping fluid to turbines built into each of the four wheels—has been kicking around Detroit for a decade or more.

Experimental versions built in this country lacked the zip and go demanded by American drivers. It was found wanting in efficiency generally. So nobody in Detroit is holding his breath until details of Ferguson's "revolutionary" car are forthcoming from London.

BLINKETY-BLANK

NEWS FROM London emphasizes that the British, in their shy way, do not entertain high regard for the flirtatious wink. As a result, public indignation is building up over "winking" turn signals on cars now cruising the island's roads.

The whole matter received a going-over in the staid old House of Commons a few days ago. Minister of Transport John Boyd-Carpenter was asked by a member how much longer drivers will be compelled to put up with the nuisance of "these blinking lights."

His interrogator feared "the stage will be reached when nearly everything and everybody is blinking at everything and everybody else with intolerable consequences." What these might be, he did not elaborate.

The unblinking Transport Minister said he is awaiting a report on the matter of deblinking the nation. This exasperated several Commons members who pointed out that 33,000 new flashing cars go on the roads each day.

Which are a lot of blinkety-blanks.

These Days

When Robert M. Hutchins of the Ford Foundation's Fund for the Republic appeared on "Meet the Press," he had a very tough time with the correspondents who questioned him. On this, as on most such programs, there is often a sympathetic newsman who tries to be so fair that he leans over backward to help the man on the spot.

It is significant that on this occasion, Hutchins stood alone and the reason may be that he created animosity by his answers which too often dodged the issue. For instance, this colloquy between Robert Hutchins and Frederick Woltman is to the point with regard to the employment of one who took the plea of the Fifth Amendment to a question involving Communism:

"Woltman: Would you also hire a Nazi or a Fascist, or a Ku Klux Klanner?"

"Hutchins: This question is a real flying saucer."

"Woltman: Well you didn't answer it."

"Hutchins: I beg your pardon, I did."

"Woltman: You would also hire a Nazi—"

"Hutchins: No, I didn't say I would."

"Woltman: I'm sorry, I thought you said you would hire a Communist."

"Hutchins: No, I said the great question always is what is the individual in himself? This is the American principle, therefore the question cannot be answered. The question is what is this individual, what is this job that you wish him to undertake?"

"Woltman: Do you believe with the Supreme Court that the Communist Party is a conspiracy to overthrow our democratic form of government?"

"Hutchins: I certainly do."

"Woltman: So if a person arrived in your office who was a member of the Communist Party, known member of the Communist Party, you would disregard that?"

"Hutchins: Not at all, not at all; this is an absolutely relevant fact. The question remains you're perfectly familiar with the enormous number of voluntary organizations that there are in the United States and you're perfectly familiar with the enormous infinite great many gradations in membership and knowledge of the purposes of these organizations; I merely say that the theoretical, the flying saucer that you have hurled does not decide any questions because the ultimate issue is what is this individual in himself? This is the American principle."

"Woltman: Well would you still say whether you would knowingly hire a member of the Communist Party?"

"Hutchins: This question cannot be answered in those terms."

What Hutchins wanted to say was that he would and did hire such a person if he could use his services, but he permitted himself to get so involved that he failed to make this point. This is characteristic of the entire broadcast.

I have a transcript of that broadcast and have studied it carefully. I have read the references to Earl Browder and an examination of Hutchins by Lawrence Spivak on the subject of blacklisting. From the words as taken down stenographically, it is possible to reach two conclusions:

"winters aren't what they used to be." In some recent winters those who sought to contradict this assumption were hard-pressed for temperature figures to buttress their argument.

But if this doesn't develop into an "old-fashioned" winter, it is at least starting out like one. All time low temperatures for this period have been registered in many areas. Officially, of course, it's still fall. Winter doesn't begin until December 21, according to the calendar. But this year, in some sections of the country, it seems to have jumped the gun.

CHAPTER FORTY-ONE

"SO THAT'S why Paula called me Roger," Clyde said, dazed by the revelation that he was Roger's son, but applying his new knowledge first to his obsessive love. "Because I look enough like him so that she noticed it when she was drugged."

"Your eyes and your coloring are Bessie," Jane said, "but like size, your features are a lot like Roger's. That's why Bessie kept you away after you grew up. There isn't a startling resemblance and your expression and personality are completely different. Still, if a person had any reason to suspect the relationship there'd be little doubt. And, Clyde—Roger never knew you existed, that is, he never knew you were his son until you came back from the army. When you were younger you looked so much like your mother, I saw Roger in New York a month ago and he told me then. He was heart sick. He always wanted children. If he had only known before—"

"Did he desert my mother?" Clyde asked.

"It wasn't like that," Jane said. "It was—one of those things. Roger was always attractive to women and Bessie—she wasn't a pretty girl, no one noticed her. And she—made the advances." And he started to speak she went on quickly. "These aren't nice things to say but it's long past time to have a little fresh air and truth on this situation. Bessie found out Roger was sorry for her and she hated him for that. Poor Roger! His compassion brought him so much unhappiness and created so much for others. But Bessie never told him about the baby. And she wanted desperately to conceal from Albert the fact that the boy was not his own. Roger introduced them and Albert married Bessie right after she broke with Roger. He never knew Clyde was not his own boy."

Shandy bent over, cutting the cord that tied the boy's hands. "What were you up to out there in the garden?" he asked curiously.

ly. And then answered his own question. "Oh, of course, you were trying to keep me from catching Bessie."

Lois started to speak, checked herself and met Jane's eyes.

Clyde tugged at the cord on his ankles. "Cut them," he said. "Let me get up."

"No," Lois cried warningly. "No, don't let him go yet. Follow Bessie. Hurry, Shandy, hurry!"

He pounded across the lawn to the Kibbee cottage. The door was wide open. The living room was empty. In the bedroom Bessie was saying, "Albert, I have to do it. But I love you."

After a horrified glance, Shandy hurried himself across the room. Bessie, tears pouring down her cheeks, was holding a pillow on top of Albert's face. And over his light pajamas Albert wore a black velvet housecoat.

"Congratulations," Mignonne said over the telephone. "It's a superb job. One of your best. Roger Brindle's readers will love it and one of the major book clubs has been asking for it. Partly because of the publicity, of course. Anyhow, I'm getting you a cut on the book club. And I have a wonderful assignment for you."

"No," Lois said quickly. "No more jobs. I'm going to be married."

"But this one—"

"There's some one at the door," Lois put down the telephone and admitted an elderly messenger with a long box of flowers bearing Shandy's card and a phrase in his writing that brought color into her face.

Jane Brindle, sitting at a window of Lois' Murray Hill apartment, smiled. "Love agrees with you. And with Shandy. I've never seen such a change in a man. I'm so happy for you both."

Lois stepped over suitcases, tissue paper, and boxes in the cluttered room to find vases. While she arranged the flowers she said soberly, "And yet this happiness has grown out of Roger's death. It—"

"Don't think of it that way. To know that, even indirectly, he had a part in such happiness—Roger was really good, Lois. Mistaken, yes. But good in a way Albert could never have understood. Warmly, humanly good. Compassionate. While Albert—"

Lois set the vases of fragrant deep red roses on the table. "Jane, did you know from the beginning that it was Albert Kibbee who had killed Roger?"

"I guessed from the moment I got Helen Thomas' anonymous letter. Helen, of course, thought Carol had done it. He was free to marry Doc. But I was afraid because, just a month earlier, I had seen Roger in New York. He told me then about Clyde. The boy had been home only a week but by that time Roger was convinced he was his son. There were so many points of resemblance. Roger was heart sick, not only because he had neglected his boy. And then he could not help worrying for fear Albert would see what he had seen."

"But to kill him for a thing done more than twenty years before—"

"It was more complicated than that," Jane leaned back in her chair, her hands clasped lightly on her lap. "Albert broke up our marriage. I have wondered ever since if I could have prevented it but the thing was so insidious."

Albert, she explained, had been a little man with a big dream. A dream of perfection. He had set his heart on the ministry and he had failed not once, but over and over. His voice, his appearance, an inexorable vein of iron that made him as ruthless with his parishioners as with himself defeated his purpose.

"What he wanted," Jane explained, "was to worship God perfectly. He is partly a mystic, partly a child, with enormous potentialities for good. So long as he believed in good, that is. But a child—there is nothing so cruel, Lois, nothing so hard of heart as a child."

QUESTION AND ANSWER

M. S.: I am in my late forties and am suffering from poor bladder control. What can be done for this condition?

Answer: There are many causes for incontinence of the urine, such as paralysis of the bladder, injury to the spinal cord and chronic disease of the kidneys.

Since the type of treatment varies in each case, a thorough physical examination is necessary to determine the source of the difficulty before treatment can be carried out.

Thankful For Turkey Hash?

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — Whatever happened to the old-fashioned Thanksgiving?

The formal religious quality of Thanksgiving seems almost to have disappeared. A minister here estimated that only one of ten people went to church on the holiday this year.

Somehow that doesn't seem as bad to me as it does to the minister.

There are many days of the year in which men pay gratitude to their Lord in church.

But Thanksgiving is a more personal time, when a man's God can be thought of as leaving a candlelit, prayer-loud cathedral to go out of doors and see his people taking his gifts of food and fun while they laugh out loud.

It is the informal religious quality of Thanksgiving that is important, but time seems slowly draining it away, too.

We are so overburdened with plenty that many regard Thanksgiving as a chore rather than a celebration. We groan, "God, the turkey'll be on the table for days and days."

The yen is for a slimmer, smaller bird that won't last on the plate so long. Some heathen voices are even heard to moan, "I don't like turkey."

Don't like turkey? A man might just as well quibble about how the sun shines on America.

The turkey is more native to this land than any treasonous voice raised against it. It fed the people in a time when hunger was a problem and plenty hadn't yet become an ordeal.

The splendid fat silhouette of the turkey is America's oldest symbol of abundant fruitfulness. The owl cries "who-o-o," but the turkey says "gobble, gobble!" And that appetizing exclamation forecasts his own fate.

What really happened to the old-fashioned Thanksgiving? In the city it too often has lost its country flavor, the savor of the land.

Thanksgiving is the holiday of the year that most has the rich taste of the earth about it. It is above all days a celebration of the joys of the stomach. It is a full belly against the empty threat of winter. It has a cider tang.

Mankind has hungered so many generations in so many places in the dark. Thanksgiving Day is America's bounteous answer. It is a long feast that usually begins in sunlight and at the close is lit by candles. The sun doesn't really set on Thanksgiving Day. It just creeps off.

God Himself walked among His people in this land last Thanksgiving Day and whispered a saying as old as the old world itself: "Good appetite!" It was a day when eating was a form of worship.

So for days after Thanksgiving you have to eat turkey hash? More than two thirds of the race of mankind cannot know the wealth of turkey hash because they never even see the turkey!

Past Chiefs Vote Funds To Medina Pythian Home

The Past Chiefs Club of the Pythian Sisters voted to send a donation to the Medina Pythian Home at a meeting held recently with 12 members present.

Meeting in the home of Mrs. W. E. Fitzpatrick of Elm Ave., the group also decided to give a Christmas basket to a home for the aged.

Mrs. Irvin Reid, president of the organization, presided over the business session and closed it with the 100th Psalm.

Mrs. Loring Evans was in charge of the program and used two readings to carry out the Thanksgiving theme. The readings were entitled, "What Is There To Be Thankful For", and "Thanksgiving Around the World".

The program was closed with members participating in a puzzle game.

The next meeting will be Dec. 28 in the home of Miss Clarissa Talbot of Watt St., with Mrs. Nanette Davis serving as co-hostess. Silent sisters will be revealed at this meeting.

Refreshments were served by the hostess.

Like coffee flavor? Add a tablespoon of instant coffee powder to a package of vanilla pudding-and-pie filling mix when you are adding the liquid called for in the package directions. When the pudding has cooled pour it into sherbet glasses and chill; serve with whipped cream beaten with confectioner's sugar and cocoa.

Care Important In Selecting Girls' Socks, Stockings

One of the most popular gifts for campus belles is a new supply of stockings and socks.

But the well-intentioned Santa should make his selections with care, for these junior glamor girls have definite ideas on what they want.

Here is help for the shopper, based on a nation-wide survey made among girls aged ten to 16.

The survey proved first that these young ladies are highly fashion conscious, and that they like a varied wardrobe of different types of ankle and knee socks, plus plenty of nylons.

The favorite ankle sock was found to be plain white with turn-down cuff, but the girls also want a few pairs of solid color socks to match or contrast with certain outfits.

Knee-high socks to wear with Bermuda shorts and kilts also are musts for most young moderns.

Favorite style of these is the wool or cotton rib or cable-knit, in colors to match either sweaters or shorts.

Young girls also have definite idea about their party nylons. They like them sheer and seamless, in sun-tan tones.

Girls with problem legs—too fat or too thin—will welcome the new nylon stretch stockings, which fit perfectly over plump or gangly legs, stay put and present no size problem.

Future Of Merged CIO-AFL To Hinge On George Meany

Editors Note — AFL and CIO will merge next week into a single, powerful alliance of 16 million members. What are the aims of this power group? The answers depend largely on one man, George Meany. This first of three articles by a veteran labor reporter looks at Meany the man.

By NORMAN WALKER

NEW YORK (AP)—George Meany, erstwhile Bronx plumber, became head of the AFL three years ago. He quickly announced his primary aim was to arrange a merger with the CIO.

It seemed an impossible task. Jealousies and conflicts among rival unions and their leaders had doomed many prior merger attempts.

Considering all the problems, three years has been a short time. For Meany, with his typical plodding, make-haste-slowly approach, has succeeded in steering the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations into a single, powerful alliance of 16 million members. It will end a 20-year split in organized labor.

Will the new organization endure? What will this formidable combination mean in terms of new inroads against employers, in organizing more union members, in influencing national politics — the stated union objectives for the merger?

Answers to these questions largely depend on Meany, the pudgy, 225-pound, coldly practical union veteran. Walter Reuther, dynamic young head of the CIO, has stepped aside and Meany, as the undisputed choice for president of the new AFL-CIO, will be America's No. 1 labor chief.

He has tried to calm the fears expressed by some businessmen and politicians that the merged union federation will become a "giant labor monopoly" seeking eventually to take over control of the government.

"To indicate that the united labor movement will attempt to horsewhip the rest of the country is a complete distortion of the facts," says the blunt-spoken, 61-year-old Meany.

"It is dedicated, not to predatory objectives, but to serve as a force for good in the progress of our country."

The merger is all set. It will be formalized at separate AFL and CIO conventions beginning Thursday, followed next week by a joint convention of the new AFL-CIO.

This joint convention, by the way, will be in an armory just a few blocks from Grand Central Station. The rail terminal is one of the structures Meany helped build when as a young man he was lugging his plumber's wrenches around New York.

Those were the days when

Meany's wages were the chief support for his grandfather, his mother and seven younger brothers and sisters. His father Mike, a local union president and Democratic Meany, Irish as they come, married an Irish girl, a garment workers' union member.

Meany's rise in unionism was swift. Becoming president of the New York State Federation of Labor in 1934, he pushed 72 labor bills through the State Legislature in one year. His achievements led to his selection as the AFL's national secretary-treasurer five years later.

Ever since then, Meany has been a man to be reckoned with in union affairs. While the late AFL President William Green was inclined to compromise and avoid conflict, Meany as his chief lieutenant was constantly prodding Green to take more stands.

Gradually, both before and after he was selected to head the AFL on Green's death in November 1952, Meany quietly took on all the old-line AFL chieftains in tests of strength and, by besting them one by one, has in practically every case earned their respect and support.

The AFL, now with about 11 million members, has been considered on the whole conservative. The smaller CIO, with about five million members, and regarded on the "left" on the American scene. It appears likely that Meany will try to steer a middle course, whipping the old-line AFL chieftains into more economic and political activity while taming the CIO to a more moderate course.

Fire Prevention is Better than Fire Insurance!

—and cheaper in the long run

One of the greatest advantages of Vibrapac Concrete Masonry farm buildings is fire safety. Farms are usually far from fire-fighting equipment. When fire gets started, there is nothing that can be done except get the livestock out — if you can — then watch it burn.

The trend everywhere is to replace old farm buildings or in expanding is to build with concrete masonry units. It reduces the danger of fire, improves sanitary conditions and practically eliminates upkeep and repairs. So play safe. Build with fire-safe Vibrapac Concrete Masonry units. Ask for bulletin.

Small College Role Hailed By Earl Warren

WILMINGTON, Ohio (AP)—The small college is the "leaven in the loaf of higher education," Chief Justice Earl Warren believes.

He told an academic convocation at Wilmington College yesterday that the small college is "doing a great job."

"The small college was the beginning of education in the United States," Warren said. "It came before the public schools and will ever lend its influence to this great country."

He said all citizens and students in particular should take a greater interest and part in government.

"Every generation either improves its government or lets it go backward," he said, adding that many governments have failed in the past "because they did not learn that a free government is not a form, but the spirit of the people."

The convocation was part of a three-day program dedicating Friends Hall, a new dormitory for 100 freshmen women.

The Quaker supported school conferred an honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters on the chief justice and an honorary degree of Doctor of Science on Charles F. Kettering, Dayton, Ohio industrialist and inventor, Kettering initiated a $400,000 fund raising drive. Part of the proceeds went into construction of the new dormitory.

Those were the days when

Meany's wages were the chief support for his grandfather, his mother and seven younger brothers and sisters. His father Mike, a local union president and Democratic Meany, Irish as they come, married an Irish girl, a garment worker's union member.

Meany's rise in unionism was swift. Becoming president of the New York State Federation of Labor in 1934, he pushed 72 labor bills through the State Legislature in one year. His achievements led to his selection as the AFL's national secretary-treasurer five years later.

Ever since then, Meany has been a man to be reckoned with in union affairs. While the late AFL President William Green was inclined to compromise and avoid conflict, Meany as his chief lieutenant was constantly prodding Green to take more stands. Gradually, both before and after he was selected to head the AFL on Green's death in November 1952, Meany quietly took on all the old-line AFL chieftains in tests of strength and, by besting them one by one, has in practically every case earned their respect and support.

The AFL, now with about 11 million members, has been considered on the whole conservative. The smaller CIO, with about five called "radical" and regarded on the "left" on the American scene. It appears likely that Meany will try to steer a middle course, whipping the old-line AFL chieftains into more economic and political activity while taming the CIO to a more moderate course.

A species of catfish found in the Nile has the remarkable habit of Green to take more stands. Gradually, both before and after

CONCRETE MASONRY

Fire Prevention is Better than Fire Insurance!

Vibrapac Concrete Masonry Gives You —

- FIRE SAFETY
- STEAM SAFETY
- WEATHER TIGHTNESS
- BUILT-IN INSULATION
- LIFETIME DURABILITY
- LOW WEAR COST
- LOW INSURANCE RATES
- EASY FINISHING
- HEAT-PROOFING
- VERMIN-PROOFING
- STRUCTURAL BEAUTY
- LOW BUILDING COST
- RAPID CONSTRUCTION

—and cheaper in the long run

One of the greatest advantages of Vibrapac Concrete Masonry term buildings is fire safety. Farms are usually far from fire-fighting equipment. When fire gets started there is nothing that can be done except get the livestock out — if you can — then watch it burn.

The trend everywhere in replacing old farm buildings or in expanding is to build with concrete masonry units. It reduces the danger of fire, improves sanitary conditions and practically eliminates upkeep and repairs. So play safe. Build with fire-safe Vibrapac Concrete Masonry units. Ask for bulletins.

Small College Role Hailed By Earl Warren

WILMINGTON, Ohio (AP) — The small college is the "heaven in the loaf of higher education," Chief Justice Earl Warren believes.

He told an academic convocation at Wilmington College yesterday that the small college is "doing a great job."

"The small college was the beginning of education in the United States," Warren said. "It came before the public schools and will ever lend its influence to this great country."

He said all citizens and students in particular should take a greater interest and part in government.

"Every generation either improves its government or lets it go backward," he said, adding that many governments have failed in the past "because they did not learn that a free government is not a form, but the spirit of the people."

The convocation was part of a three-day program dedicating Friends Hall, a new dormitory for 100 freshmen women.

The Quaker supported school conferred an honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters on the chief justice and an honorary degree of Doctor of Science on Charles F. Kettering, Dayton, Ohio industrialist and inventor. Kettering initiated a $400,000 fund raising drive. Part of the proceeds went into construction of the new dormitory.

CAPRI, Italy (AP)—Unable to afford costly bricks, Nicolo Soja, 47, used scrap material from a nearby military dump when he built a house back in 1948. His wife and two daughters moved in with him.

WASHINGTON (AP)—The men and women taking part in the President's White House Conference on Education opening today would like to think it will do good. Will it? Or will it be just a lot of people letting off steam?

The delegates include educators, labor, farm and civic leaders, businessmen and clergymen. They may, in spite of their varied views on how to get more schools and teachers, reach some majority opinions without explosions. But they still seem to face a triple problem of time, politics and money.

This conference has had a build-up for almost two years, a lot of fanfare, and countrywide interest. President Eisenhower proposed it in a message to Congress Jan. 7, 1954.

Then he created a committee of 34 men and women to advise him on what the government should do about the country's educational needs.

Since then, and at the committee's suggestion, all the states and territories have had their own conferences to discuss what they thought needed to be done.

Reports on all those states' conferences were supposed to be sent to the committee. Not all of them have arrived yet. Only about five states took the trouble to print and bind their reports.

This writer saw them and the unbound reports in the committee's files. Some of those unbound ones appear so disorganized that — if they are a true reflection of what happened at the state conferences — those conferences must have been chaos.

There is disagreement among the states, and within the individual state conferences, on whether the states should have federal aid. That question—federal aid to education—will probably be the most explosive at this conference.

Meanwhile, state officials—governors and educators—appointed delegates to this convention. They didn't necessarily have to be the same people who took part in their states' conferences, and some of them apparently don't have to be guided by what their state conferences agreed on.

When this conference finishes up Thursday, its reports on recommendations will be turned over to the President's committee. That committee doesn't have to be bound by the action of this conference.

This is where the time element enters. The 34-member committee which Eisenhower created to advise him doesn't meet to decide on recommendations until Jan. 16.

But probably before then—perhaps in the first 10 days of January — Eisenhower will send his State of the Union message to Congress, a natural vehicle for any recommendations he wants to make on education.

He could hardly make any specific recommendations unless he had been informed long before the committee's Jan. 16 meeting what its recommendations were likely to be.

But if he makes specific recommendations before he gets the committee's report, then a question arises: Why the committee at all and why the conferences?

He could speak in general terms

1. That Hutchins is vitally interested in civil liberties but has not thought out the subject philosophically. For instance, he objects to what he calls blacklisting, by which he means the rejection of a person's right to tell all and sundry that he will not attend a movie performance or witness a radio and television show because a Communist is related to it. But if, let us say, I were prohibited from saying that, would it not be an infraction of the First Amendment guaranteeing me freedom of speech and of the press?

2. On the subject of Communism, Hutchins, who was dean of a law school and president of a university, displays a lack of knowledge which would indicate that he has not taken the time to do his homework. When he sits down to study and ceases to depend on hand-picked experts, he will undoubtedly reach the conclusion that this is a dangerous and vicious conspiracy to destroy Western civilization which, I am sure, Hutchins does not want to see destroyed.

This ignorance is not unusual among otherwise well-informed persons, because the Communist movement from 1848 to this day makes bleak, monotonous reading and men duck it. Also much that is read sounds fantastic, unbelievable and even childish. Therefore, it is avoided. But this movement is a fact and now controls about 900,000,000 persons and keeps up in a state of war.

Basilio Rated Over DeMarco In Title Tilt

NEW YORK (AP)—If Carmen Basilio and Tony DeMarco repeat their savage battle of June 10 when they meet for the second time Wednesday in Boston Garden, their welterweight title match should be the "fight of the year."

Basilio won the championship from DeMarco in Syracuse, N. Y., in June, but now he must face rough and ready Tony in the ex-champion's hometown. On the strength of his 12th round technical knockout victory five months ago, Basilio is rated a 9 to 5 favorite.

In the first match, DeMarco dazed Basilio in the first and third rounds, but was dropped twice in the 10th and was out on his feet in the 12th.

Both welters are solid thumpers who are converted southpaws. Basilio's left hook is his best weapon, a blow that dropped Kid Gavilan. DeMarco usually starts with a rush but tires in the late rounds. In his last start, DeMarco knocked out Chico Vejar in the first round.

The radio-TV fans will get a break with ABC scheduled to carry the 15-round match.

Billy McNeese and Tony Johnson, two strong light heavyweights who are willing to trade punches freely, meet here tonight over the 10-round televised route.

They fought once before, May 9, to a 10-round draw.

Schools Reminded To Call In Results

Home teams are asked to call in results of basketball games when playing league games. When playing non-league tilts, call in score whether playing at home or away.

Call league game scores in at about 10:15 night of game. Phone in non-league scores the morning following game at about 8 a. m. If league games are played same night as non-league games, non-league results may be called in that same evening as Herald office will be open.

Herald phones are 580 and 581.

Pro Grid Chiefs Hold Yearly Draft

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—America's top collegiate football talent will be tapped by the pros today as the National Football League holds its earliest player draft meeting in history.

Commissioner Bert Bell will open the annual player selection meeting with the first order of business the bonus choice draw, an out of the hat contest with the winning team earning first crack at any eligible grid draftee in the nation.

Only Green Bay, Pittsburgh and the Chicago Cardinals will participate in the bonus draw since all other teams have won it since the plan was initiated in 1947, and are ineligible to try again until every franchise has made a selection.

Babe Zaharias Fights Cancer

GALVESTON, Tex. (AP)—Babe Zaharias, famed woman athlete, was to start undergoing a week-long series of tests today to determine how she is doing in her third fight with cancer.

The Babe, who has undergone two previous cancer operations, entered John Sealy Hospital here yesterday. Mrs. Zaharias said increasing pain in her right hip led her to have some X-rays taken at Tampa, Fla., where she's been recuperating after her latest operation two months ago. She said she returned to Sealy on the advice of her Tampa physician.

Crippled Marion Barber Is Lauded

CHICAGO (AP)—C. Dudley Williams, a Marion, Ohio, barber, has been cited for best exemplifying the theme, "Conquering Crippling."

The theme is that of the National Society of Crippled Children and Adults which yesterday cited Williams for being a "productive member of his community" despite the loss of his right leg.

Williams, 57, lost the leg when

Only One Bowl Still Lacking Full Pairing

CHICAGO (AP)—The bowl picture was four fifths complete today, chock full of veteran postseason performers, while the abstainers and the lesser lights of college football socked away their equipment until next season.

Only the Gator Bowl, among the five major attractions, is without a pairing. And the selectors are expected to make their move today, with Auburn and Tennessee leading the rumor list.

Except for the Rose and Orange bowls, whose programs are printed according to championship results in the Pacific Coast-Big Ten and Big Seven-Atlantic Coast conferences, the other bowl selections were completed, after Saturday's games.

Here's the way they look: Rose (Pasadena, Calif.)—UCLA (8-1) vs. Michigan State (8-1). Orange (Miami, Fla.)—Oklahoma (10-0) vs. Maryland (10-0). Cotton (Dallas)—Texas Christian (9-1) vs. Mississippi (9-1). Sugar (New Orleans)—Georgia Tech (8-1) vs. Pitt (7-3).

All four are set for Jan. 2. The Gator Bowl is scheduled Dec. 31.

Of the four completed bowls, six of the eight teams are among the top 10 in the Associated Press poll. The Orange Bowl has the cream of the crop, with first-ranked Oklahoma and third-ranked Maryland. Mississippi and UCLA are the only two current selections never to have won in a major bowl. Both have lost three.

Miami Dominates Mid-Am Star '11'

GRANVILLE (AP)—Miami University's unbeaten football team placed six members on the All Mid-American Conference eleven selected by conference coaches.

The team: Ends, Jack Hecker, Bowling Green, and Pres Bliss, Miami; tackles, Roger Siesel, Miami, and Ken Russell, Bowling Green; guards, Russ Giganti, Miami, and Bob McCollins, Marshall; center, Dick Matern, Miami; quarterback, Tom Dimitroff, Miami; halfbacks, Tirrel Burton, Miami, and Len Hellyer, Marshall, and fullback, Mike Norcia, Kent State.

Nashua, destined to become the year's 3-year-old champion, averaged $63,609 per race in his first 11 starts this year. He won nine of the races, finished second in the Kentucky Derby and third against older horses in the Sysonby.

he was hit by a train at the age of 15. The society's award is given annually to the individual "determined to outwit his disabilities."

Value Of Farm Land In Ohio On Rise

Pickaway County farmers can obtain experienced advice and up-to-date literature on their farming problems at the County Extension Office located in the Post Office Building, S. Court St., Circleville. The office here is the link between district farmers and the College of Agriculture, Ohio State University.

Market value of Ohio's farm land rose an average of more than $14 an acre between July 1954 and July this year, according to W. A. Wayt of the agricultural economics and rural sociology department of Ohio State University.

This represents an increase of about eight percent. Translated in terms of dollars and cents, Ohio farm land averaged nearly $195 an acre in July, compared to $180 a year earlier, Wayt says.

In about the same period, Wayt notes, prices of farm commodities in Ohio fell nearly 10 percent.

Nationally, a continued moderate advance in dollar value of U. S. farm land during the first half of this year brought farm real estate values back to their previous peak reached following the Korean outbreak.

Compared with a year earlier, farm land values in 36 states showed gains of 2 percent or more this July and the national average was 5 percent. Largest increases occurred in the central Corn Belt where gains ranged from 5 to 8 percent. Market values varied from an average of $360 an acre in New Jersey down to $14 or $15 in some regions of the Southwest.

The strength in land values, according to the Department of Agriculture, appears to be based in part on strong demand for additional land to enlarge existing farms and permit more efficient use of farm machinery.

More liberal credit terms also is given as a factor, plus favorable crop prospects and a generally favorable outlook in the national economy. Another factor which may have influenced Ohio values, according to Wayt, is the sale of land for residential or other non-farm uses.

Roundup permanent pastures can be renovated and fertilized to produce higher yields of legumes and grasses at a lower cost per acre next year, reports the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee.

These rebuilt pastures can often carry twice as many live stock per acre as formerly, according to Purdue agronomists. This means more meat and milk and higher return for livestock and dairy farmers.

The committee suggests three steps in renovating rundown pasture: 1—Kill out the old sod; 2—Line the soil where needed and build up its fertility by adding fertilizer carrying nitrogen, phosphate and potash; 3—Re-seed the pasture with high yielding, well adapted strains of legumes and grasses.

In killing out the old sod this fall, pastures can be cut up with a disk, dug with a field cultivator, or shallow plowed.

The lime and fertilizer needed to produce high yielding pasture can be broadcast when you plow, or added when you disk or dig with the field cultivator, says the committee.

Ohio dairymen will hear a report on the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway at their annual meeting on the Ohio State University campus here December 10.

Robert R. Collinge, director of public relations for the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence association, Washington, D. C., will discuss agriculture's stake in the development.

Carlton F. Christian, Ohio State University's extension editor, will review progress in the dairy industry. His topic will be "Route Markers Along the Dairy Highway."

Others who will appear on the program include Ralph Shoemaker, president of the Ohio Dairymen's association; L. L. Rummell, dean of the college of Agriculture of Ohio State University and director of the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station; W. B. Wood, Ohio director of extension, and Fordyce Ely, chairman of the dairy science department.

A special program has been arranged for women. Mrs. Homer Jacobs of Dayton, O., will speak

Local Aid Invited For Needy People

Contributions of food and cash are being asked here in the annual Christian Rural Overseas Program campaign, being held throughout Pickaway County.

George Hamrick, county CROP chairman, and a committee of county community leaders, are asking farmers to donate farm commodities or cash from the 1955 harvest to be shipped overseas for distribution by the churches in the areas of need.

The ninth CROP drive is a nationwide effort to share the abundance of American farms with hungry people.

Numerous expressions of gratitude from those who have received CROP gifts point to the effective work done by the CROP organization through the distribution facilities of Church World Service, its parent agency.

The CROP appeal is organized in every township of the county. However, contributions may also be made to the local county CROP office in the basement of the Post Office in Circleville.

Foreign Needs Told To Youth

COLUMBUS (AP)—A lady cleric has advised Protestant youth that foreigners must be helped to rise out of what she called hunger, poverty, superstition and fear.

The Rev. Mrs. James D. Wyker of Mount Vernon, vice president of the National Council of Churches, addressed the closing session of the Ohio Christian Youth Rally.

Mrs. Wyker said the yearning of people throughout the world for good things in life presents a challenge to youth to help.

Those elected to office in the Ohio Christian Youth Movement included Milton Patton and Mary Robinson, both of Wilmington, named vice president and secretary.

CIRCLEVILLE HIGH

The Rev. John C. Hurst talked briefly at the annual Hi-Y Thanksgiving assembly in the school auditorium. The Rev. Mr. Hurst, pastor of the Church of the Brethren, addressed two assemblies—one for the Corwin building, grades 5-8, and one for the high school.

Following a scripture reading by the club's chaplain, Carl Gene Porter, six of the club members represented "average people from six different walks of life." They were:

Ralph Jones, factory worker; Edward Walters, farmer; Richard Banks, doctor; Richard Greeno, executive; David Hammel, teacher; and Austin Laughlin, high school student. Each of these members told why the group he represented should be thankful.

Then Edward Martin sang a solo, "Bless This House," after which the Rev. Mr. Hurst gave a very challenging talk.

This year's Hi-Y Club officers are:

Robert Wellington, president; Ralph Jones, vice-president; David Hammel, secretary; Wendell Emerine, treasurer; and Mr. Frederick Goeglein, faculty adviser.
